Program Learning Goals

Note: these are required for all undergraduate degree programs and majors now, and will be required for all graduate and professional degree programs in 2012. Nonetheless, all programs are encouraged to complete these now.

- Program Learning Goals
- Students demonstrate an understanding of the cultural, socio-political, and historical formations, connections, conditions, and transformations evident throughout the African World.
 - Students identify, critique, and appreciate the intersections between race, class, gender, ethnicity, and sexuality from the historical and existential perspectives of African and African-descended peoples.
 - Students implement interdisciplinary research methods and methodological perspectives applicable to advanced study, community development, and public service.

Assessment

Assessment plan includes student learning goals, how those goals are evaluated, and how the information collected is used to improve student learning. An assessment plan is required for undergraduate majors and degrees. Graduate and professional degree programs are encouraged to complete this now, but will not be required to do so until 2012.

Is this a degree program (undergraduate, graduate, or professional) or major proposal? Yes

Does the degree program or major have an assessment plan on file with the university Office of Academic Affairs? Yes

Summarize how the program's current quarter-based assessment practices will be modified, if necessary, to fit the semester calendar.

With the creation of a new capstone course (AAAS 4788), we will collect the research-based papers from all majors and use them as part of the assessment plan. These research papers will replace assessment portfolios and will supplement course evaluations, SEIs, exit interviews, and biennial curriculum and syllabi reviews as usable metrics for the annual major program assessment.

Program Specializations/Sub-Plans

If you do not specify a program specialization/sub-plan it will be assumed you are submitting this program for all program specializations/sub-plans.

Arts and Sciences General Education (GE) Program: The GE program for untagged B.A. and B.S. degrees in Arts and Sciences was approved by the Council on Academic Affairs on May 26, 2010, after receiving approval from the Arts and Sciences Faculty Senate. All the programs presented here follow the approved GE program.

College of Arts and Sciences Transition Policy: The College of Arts and Sciences is committed to the principles outlined in the university's Pledge to Undergraduate Students. Each unit has a plan on how best to assist its majors and minors through the transition. Chair, Arts and Sciences CCI
Re: African-American and African Studies BA

Dear Professor Krissek:

The CCI's Arts and Humanities 2 subcommittee met on April 6, 2011, and reviewed the semester conversion plans for the BA in African-American and African Studies submitted by the Department of African-American and African Studies. This program has been re-envisioned, after a thorough review of comparable programs at peer institutions, but the total number of courses required is the same as in the quarter-based version. The committee recommended some corrections and clarifications but found no substantive problems with the proposal and voted unanimously to send this program on to the full CCI for review, pending revision. I have looked over the revised document and noticed only a few points that may be in need of attention at the CCI level:

- AAAS (575): History of South Africa should use the semester, rather than quarter, number, if available.
- On the semester advising sheet, the core course listed as 4921 appears as COMPSTDS/AAAS 4921 on the preceding list of courses (both in the list broken down by department and the list broken down by cognate area) making it difficult to find. If the course were listed as AAAS/COMPSTD 4921 (or, even better, AAAS 4921), this difficulty would be removed.
- On the curriculum map, the committee recommended removing the categories that are under the headings "General Education Courses" and "African Language Program Courses."

Sincerely,

Dear Larry,

We are submitting the semester versions of the undergraduate programs from the Department of African American and African Studies: the BA in African American and African Studies and the Minor in African American and African Studies. The new minors in Somali and Swahili from the department were submitted under a separate cover letter earlier this year. The semester degree proposals for the BA and Minor in AAAS were reviewed by me at various stages, and reviewed and approved by a subdivision of the Arts and Humanities Disciplinary Advisory Panel on Curriculum on March 4, 2011.

Bachelor of Arts in African American and African Studies: The BA in African American and African Studies was last revised by the department and approved by CAA on December 6, 2006. The quarter-system degree required 55 hours in the major, and the semester-system degree will require 36 credit hours of major course work. The department undertook a comprehensive study of undergraduate degrees at other institutions, and modeled a new curriculum, deleting its outdated three area studies, and creating four new cognate areas that reflect the transnational and interdisciplinarity that has become a hallmark of African American Studies and African Studies programs across the nation. Please note that the BA in AAAS has an assessment plan on file with OAA, confirmed October 15, 2010.

Minor in BA in African American and African Studies: The Minor in African American and African Studies was last revised by the department and approved by CAA on December 6, 2006 at the same time as the major. The quarter-system program required 25 hours, and the semester-system program will require 15 credit hours of course work. The minor is a course-to-course translation: 5 courses required on quarters and 5 courses required on semesters. The same two core required courses remain the same.

We are sending the program forward for review and approval in the next stage of curricular review at the Arts and Sciences Committee on Curriculum and Instruction. The courses that are specific to the program are listed under AAAS in PACER, and have been advanced along with the program form. All programs from AAAS have the approval of Arts and Humanities. If you have any questions or concerns, please do not hesitate to call or email me at 292-5727 or williams.1415@osu.edu.

Thank you for your consideration of these proposals,

Chair's Letter/Introduction/Rationale

The department's Undergraduate Studies Committee met throughout the latter half of Winter and all of Spring 2010 and determined that semester conversion offered the department a unique opportunity to make the major and minor more rigorous and our students more competitive by significantly overhauling our undergraduate curriculum. The last significant curriculum revision was effective January 7, 2007. Since then, the Undergraduate Committee performed a significant survey of similar departments at semester-system universities, proposed a revamped curriculum, and—after a series of engaged discussions in committee and with the full faculty—received no less than three unanimous votes at regularly scheduled department meetings which approved the various proposals to re-envision the undergraduate major and minor, and create a viable plan for semester conversion.

Despite significant changes planned for the undergraduate major, it was determined that the undergraduate minor should be converted to semesters without changes. The proposed semester conversion for the undergraduate minor is a literal translation of the quarter-based program, with the same core requirements (AAAS 2201 and AAAS 3310), a similar distribution requirement (all non-core courses must be at the 3000-level and above), and the same total number of courses to be taken to complete the AAAS minor. The approval of the conversion proposal for the minor was discussed within the Undergraduate Studies Committee and presented to the full department faculty. Ultimately, the faculty rendered two unanimous votes to approve the conversion of the undergraduate AAAS minor.

During early Spring 2010, the AAAS Undergraduate Studies Committee conducted a comprehensive survey of all African & African American Studies (AAAS), African & African Diaspora Studies (AADS), and Africana Studies departments, institutes, and programs at semester-system R1 (Very High Research Activity) peer universities in the U.S. Of 97 R1/Very High Research Activity semester-system universities, we determined that 31 had peer (e.g., AAAS, AADS, and Africana Studies) programs, institutes, or departments. We purposefully excluded all independent and separate African American Studies and African Studies departments, institutes, and programs from the survey since these units do not have as broad a geographic spread nor as diverse a faculty in comparison to AAAS at Ohio State. 27 of the 31 peer programs, institutes or departments at semester-system R1's with transnational and interdisciplinary majors in AAAS, AADS, or Africana Studies posted specific information about the structure of their curricula on a website or in a downloadable handbook. In the end, the results of this survey significantly shaped the new curriculum design for the AAAS major.

Our 27 peer semester-system departments, institutes, and programs averaged 32.8 hours for their majors, with 12.3 hours in core courses. 70.4% of our peer departments, institutes, and programs had a capstone/senior research seminar with the aim of producing a significant research-based project from their majors before graduation. Finally, 81.5% of our peer departments, institutes, and programs had concentration areas within their majors which were divided in full or partially into thematic or cognate areas—as opposed to geographic concentrations. The AAAS major at Ohio State has always lacked a capstone course and was divided into geographic concentrations since we first introduced the African Studies portion of our curriculum. To be in better compliance with disciplinary standards and to make our majors more competitive, both the Undergraduate Studies Committee and the full faculty—through a lengthy series of deliberations and unanimous votes during Spring 2010—agreed that the department had to restructure its curriculum.

AAAS, AADS, and Africana Studies are, by their very nature, interdisciplinary and transnational and this fact necessitated a fundamental curricular change in our department. In this specific regard, our current concentration areas—African American Studies, African Studies, and Diaspora Studies—are not particularly useful or generative as they imply unbridgeable divides across and between those three geographic spaces. Not only does this structure defy the transnationalism embraced by the vast majority of AAAS, AASDS, and Africana Studies departments, institutes, and programs across the U.S., but some of our courses did not neatly fit into just one of these geographic concentrations. Divorcing, for example, the experience of African Americans in the U.S. from the Diaspora is conceptually illogical and this informed the decision to place certain courses into geographic categories and spaces in which they did not belong. Moreover, the vast majority of our majors chose the African American Studies concentration area leading to waning enrollments in the African and Diaspora Studies courses—particularly at the 400-level and above. With the structure of the current major, we also had no guarantee that majors in the African American Studies concentration had a sufficient breadth of knowledge in African and Diaspora Studies to truly represent their matriculation in a transnational and interdisciplinary AAAS department. Indeed, there were many paths through our major which would allow students to escape, completely, taking any African or Diaspora Studies courses beyond the core courses. Moving away from geographic tracks and using transnational and interdisciplinary cognate areas will insure that AAAS graduates will have sufficient exposure to the larger Africana world and familiarity with the breadth of knowledge represented by AAAS.

In sum, the proposed semester-conversion AAAS major will have 36 hours (in comparison to 32.8 at sister units), 12 hours in core courses (in comparison to 12.3), a capstone/senior research seminar (AAAS 4788), and four transnational and interdisciplinary cognate areas—1) Representation & Performance; 2) Social Issues, Community Development, & Public Service; 3) Histories, Cultures, Languages, & Literatures; and, 4) Race, Ethnicity, Gender, & Sexuality. The nature of the cognate areas and the breadth requirement insures that our majors will be knowledgeable about the full interpretive, conceptual, and geographic scope of AAAS. In addition, the new capstone/senior research seminar and our distribution requirement—which forces our majors to take 18 hours in courses at the 4000-level and above—will insure a rigorous program of study allowing our graduates to compete on an equal- or superior-footing with graduates from sister units in graduate or professional school admissions and for jobs.

Therefore I am recommending these semester versions of our undergraduate programs:

BA in African American and African Studies
Minor in African American and African Studies

Sincerely,

Horace Newsom (H. Ike Okafor-Newsom)

AAAS, AADS, and Africana Studies are, by their very nature, interdisciplinary and transnational and this fact necessitated a fundamental curricular change in our department. In this specific regard, our current concentration areas—African American Studies, African Studies, and Diaspora Studies—are not particularly useful or generative as they imply unbridgeable divides across and between those three geographic spaces. Not only does this structure defy the transnationalism embraced by the vast majority of AAAS, AASDS, and Africana Studies departments, institutes, and programs across the U.S., but some of our courses did not neatly fit into just one of these geographic concentrations. Divorcing, for example, the experience of African Americans in the U.S. from the Diaspora is conceptually illogical and this informed the decision to place certain courses into geographic categories and spaces in which they did not belong. Moreover, the vast majority of our majors chose the African American Studies concentration area leading to waning enrollments in the African and Diaspora Studies courses—particularly at the 400-level and above. With the structure of the current major, we also had no guarantee that majors in the African American Studies concentration had a sufficient breadth of knowledge in African and Diaspora Studies to truly represent their matriculation in a transnational and interdisciplinary AAAS department. Indeed, there were many paths through our major which would allow students to escape, completely, taking any African or Diaspora Studies courses beyond the core courses. Moving away from geographic tracks and using transnational and interdisciplinary cognate areas will insure that AAAS graduates will have sufficient exposure to the larger Africana world and familiarity with the breadth of knowledge represented by AAAS.

In sum, the proposed semester-conversion AAAS major will have 36 hours (in comparison to 32.8 at sister units), 12 hours in core courses (in comparison to 12.3), a capstone/senior research seminar (AAAS 4788), and four transnational and interdisciplinary cognate areas—1) Representation & Performance; 2) Social Issues, Community Development, & Public Service; 3) Histories, Cultures, Languages, & Literatures; and, 4) Race, Ethnicity, Gender, & Sexuality. The nature of the cognate areas and the breadth requirement insures that our majors will be knowledgeable about the full interpretive, conceptual, and geographic scope of AAAS. In addition, the new capstone/senior research seminar and our distribution requirement—which forces our majors to take 18 hours in courses at the 4000-level and above—will insure a rigorous program of study allowing our graduates to compete on an equal- or superior-footing with graduates from sister units in graduate or professional school admissions and for jobs.
