Jill:

The proposal from the John Glenn College of Public Affairs to establish an undergraduate minor in Public Management was approved by the Council on Academic Affairs at its meeting on July 12, 2023. Thank you for attending the meeting to respond to questions/comments.

No additional level of internal approval is necessary. This action will be included in the Council's next Annual Activities Report to the University Senate (July 2023).

The Office of the University Registrar will work you with any implementation issues.

Please keep a copy of this message for your file on the proposal and I will do the same for the file in the Office of Academic Affairs.

If you have any questions please contact the Chair of the Council, Professor Rebecca Andridge (.1) or me.

Council on Academic Affairs
Office of Academic Affairs

Dear Dr. Randy Smith:

Please find enclosed proposals for three new undergraduate minors in Education Policy, Local Government, and Public Management. We currently offer specializations to our students in each of these areas. We are submitting these three new minors together as part of an effort to transition current "specializations" to minors. We currently offer five minors and six specializations, resulting in 11 subprograms. Ultimately, by transitioning our specializations to minors, we will reduce our offering to eight minors (no specializations). As such, we simplify our offerings for both students and advisors, expand proven programming to students outside the college, and provide the opportunity for our students to take a minor outside of our college related to their public affairs interests. The proposal to convert our specialization tracks to minors was unanimously approved by the Glenn College Undergraduate Curriculum Committee, via electronic vote, in the second week of May 2023.

The primary audience for the minor will be undergraduate students in the Glenn College and across the university who want to develop knowledge on the interface between public policy and the US education system, or their competencies in the functions of local government, or management and leadership competencies necessary for a public service career or graduate study in related fields. The program adheres to university standards for minors, while giving students ample flexibility to take courses that relate to an area of science policy of most interest to them. In closing, we thank the committee for their investment of time to review this request and welcome any feedback.

Sincerely,

Trevor L. Brown, Dean

General Information

Name: Undergraduate Minor in Public Management

Proposed Implementation Date: Autumn 2023

Academic Unit Responsible for Administering the Minor: John Glenn College of Public Affairs

Rationale

The field of public affairs consists of two core crafts: public management and policy analysis. The Public Management Minor develops management and leadership competencies necessary for a public service career or graduate study in related fields. This minor prepares students to serve in management roles for public organizations at the local, state, or national level. The minor introduces students to the fundamentals of public sector leadership, management, and budgeting, while providing training on analytical skills and tools to improve organizational performance.

The primary audience for the minor will be undergraduate students in the Glenn College and across the university who want to develop their competencies in public management. Currently, the Glenn College offers a specialization track in Public Management as part of our Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Sciences programs, but it is restricted to students pursuing a Glenn College major. This specialization is one of our most popular specializations. This proposed minor will allow students from outside the Glenn College to engage in a program of study focusing on public management. The creation of this minor is part of a larger initiative to transition our specializations to minors. We currently offer five minors and six specializations, resulting in 11 subprograms. Ultimately, by transitioning our specializations to minors, we will reduce our offering to eight minors (no specializations). As such, we simplify our offerings for both students and advisors, expand proven programming to students outside the college, and provide the opportunity for students to take a minor outside of our college related to their public affairs interests.

We anticipate that the expansion of the population able to engage with this programming will benefit the region and the state of Ohio. As we have stated in previous material, management positions in government are projected to increase significantly due to the aging workforce, and local governments and non-profit organizations often lack the resources to hire managers with graduate degrees. Thus, better training of public managers—so that they are familiar with the management tools used to enhance organizational performance—can improve employment outcomes and the quality of public and non-profit organizations.

Learning Goals/Objectives and Assessment of the Minor

Upon successful completion of this minor, students will be able to:

1. Analyze and navigate different behavioral situations in the public sector.
2. Understand the fundamentals of public budgets, budgeting strategies, and financial management.
3. Apply management tools to enhance organizational performance in the public sector.

The minor in Public Management will be reviewed each year by the College's Director of Undergraduate Studies. Faculty from the Undergraduate Curriculum Committee will assist. Evaluation criteria will include the ability of the program to 1) deliver a high-quality educational experience to participating students; 2) attract enough students to demonstrate relevance and maintain financial stability; 3) achieve a satisfactory level of student completion within a reasonable time frame. The Glenn College will also conduct periodic review of the courses to ensure they are meeting the stated learning goals of the minor.

Administration and Resource Allocation

Advising: Student advising for this minor will be provided through the John Glenn College of Public Affairs' Office of Student Services, in cooperation with students' home college advisors.

Faculty resources: The Glenn College has ample capacity to frequently offer the courses required of the minor, both through core faculty and practitioner instructors. Foundational courses are already taught regularly as part of our major and existing specialization track and should easily be able to absorb the additional enrollments generated by this new minor.

Advisory Committee: The Glenn College will coordinate the minor through an advisory committee that will be appointed by the Glenn College Director of Undergraduate Studies. The committee will consist of Glenn College faculty and staff representatives. Other units on campus that have an interest in the minor (such as the departments of city and regional planning and political science, as well as the Fisher College of Business) will be invited to participate on the minor advisory committee.

Expected enrollments: We expect to attract 15-20 undergraduates in the first year. With effort and outreach, we hope to attract additional undergraduate minors over the coming years towards a goal of 50 undergraduate minors by 2025.

Requirements for the Minor

This proposal is fully aligned with the OSU policy for Undergraduate Minors:

An undergraduate minor consists of a coherent curricular program designed to allow students to pursue academic interests that go beyond their major. Students pursue minors to complement their major's area of specialization, to better define themselves academically and to employers, to gain credit for classes previously taken that do not count towards a major degree, or merely to pursue other interests. In addition, some academic units require their students to obtain a minor. Students may take any minor in any college provided that they follow the curricular guidelines set by the college or unit that administers the minor.

Specific prerequisites are kept to a minimum. The intent of the program is to serve as an integrative experience for students who want to hone their management skills and become the next generation of leaders in their communities. Inviting students from all colleges to study public management together will enhance their ability to integrate different points of view and to learn to communicate across disciplines.

This undergraduate minor requires completion of a minimum of 15 credit hours. Given the requirements of the Glenn College's undergraduate majors, the curriculum of this minor will differ slightly depending on the student's program of study. Glenn College students will take two required courses and three electives, while non-Glenn College students will take three required courses and two electives.

Dr. Prud'homme,

I hope the semester is ending on a high note for you. The Glenn College is proposing to convert our existing specialization tracks into undergraduate minors, two of those being Public Management and Local Government. Both proposed minors include courses from the Fisher College of Business, so we are reaching out to ask for concurrence. We also welcome suggestions about other courses that might be appropriate to include. Please review and let us know if you have any feedback. We would appreciate a response by May 15 if possible. Don't hesitate to reach out to us with any questions.

Thanks, and have a nice weekend.

Hi Chris,

Thank you for the opportunity to review the minor, and apologies for the delayed response! We've had some leadership transitions in our College that I'd like to share with you. I'd like to introduce you to Jennie Babcock, who was recently appointed as our new Assistant Dean for Academic Affairs. You may already know Jennie from her tenure as our undergraduate program director. We're very excited to welcome Jennie to her new role! In addition, I recently transitioned to the position of Associate Dean of Research. We have a new Associate Dean for Academic Affairs joining us in the coming weeks. We'll make that introduction as the candidate is announced.

As for the social justice minor, we think it's a wonderful and timely offering. Social Work 3202 is with the ASC Themes Panel right now. Hopefully, it will be reviewed soon. In addition to the social work electives listed, we'd like to suggest Social Work 5030, Global Social Work Perspectives on Poverty and Inequality as another elective for your consideration.

Chris, I've enjoyed working with you over the past year and have appreciated our collaboration on courses and the minor. I trust you will enjoy working with Jennie and our new associate dean for academic affairs once the individual is onboarded.

Wishing you a great summer,

Michelle

Chris,

These are great minors and thanks for including CRP courses in the proposal. There are no concurrency issues on our end. I do have some suggestions for courses to add. See the following:

For the social justice and advocacy minor:

CRPLAN 3300 Planning for and With People; this is focused on participatory processes in planning
CRPLAN 3510 Crime, Safety, and the Urban Environment (also a GE for the Race, Ethnic and Gender Diversity foundation) The course deals with policing as well as perceptions of crime in the city
CRPLAN 2000 Introduction to City and Regional Planning; lots of social justice issues here!
CRPLAN 3610 Sex and the City; this course examines issues affecting sexual minorities.
CRPLAN 5997 Planning in the Developing World; focuses on issues concerning the society and economy of the Global South

For the Local Government minor:

CRPLAN 2000 Introduction to City and Regional Planning
CRPLAN 3210 Sustainable Urban Planning and Policy
CRPLAN 3310 Participation, Inclusion and Dispute Resolution in Planning; note: PUBAFRS 2120: Public Service and Civic Engagement is a prereq
CRPLAN 3600 Land Development this course asks students to write zoning code and learn about the site development process in the city.
CRPLAN 3610 Sex and the City; this course also in part considers the regulation of sex-oriented businesses in the city .
CRPLAN 5200 Metropolitan and Regional Planning; this course considers issues of regional policy and governance.

There is also our housing course that is cross listed with public affairs which would apply to both minors (PUBAFRS 5200/CRPLAN 5200 Planning for Housing which focuses on affordable housing policies and the city).

These are courses we teach regularly too so hopefully policy students will have some choices. They are all 3 credit hour courses.

Dear SBS and A&H Chairs and Directors,

The John Glenn College has developed a proposal to convert three of their specialization tracks (Public Management, Education Policy, Local Government) into undergraduate minors and create a brand-new minor in Social Justice Advocacy and Public Policy. Please see the attached documents.

The Glenn College is requesting concurrence for the proposed new minors. Please email your responses/concurrences to Christopher Adams (adams.615@osu.edu), Director of Student Services and Programs in JGC, and cc me. *Responses are due by Monday, May 22, 2023. Concurrence will be assumed if no response is received within two weeks.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Many thanks,
Bernadette

Hi Mytheli,

Thank you very much for your feedback here, I apologize for the delay in responding. The Glenn College greatly appreciates having the support of WGSS with these minors. I chatted further with Dr. Jill Clark, our undergraduate studies chair, and we have the following thoughts regarding your comments.

1. We agree that it makes sense to outline the differences between the Social Justice and WGPP minors. There's definitely space for both of them, and they are both very important. We can add a paragraph to the rationale where we address the similarities and distinctions.
2. We are happy to add the WGSS courses focusing on race that you outline below. Do you have a list handy that you can share with us? If not I can look at the course catalog and add some more. We did have pause about including the courses from the WGPP minor though, because that might actually serve to confuse the two minors and defeat the purpose of including the language about how they are different. Do note though, that students can always petition for classes not on the list to count toward the minor, so I could definitely envision a scenario where we would approve a WGSS course not listed on the minor if it makes sense for a particular student.

Please let us know if you have additional thoughts on this. We are also happy to chat further if you would like. Again, we greatly appreciate your support with this exciting new minor!

Best,
Chris

Subject: Concurrence request for Social Justice Advocacy minor

Dear Christopher,

I'm writing on behalf of the WGSS department, where I'm the chair of the Undergraduate Studies Committee, regarding the social justice advocacy minor.

This sounds like an important and exciting minor, and I'm glad to see Glenn putting it forward.

However, our department did have a few questions:

1. As you know, WGSS partners with the Glenn School for the Women, Gender and Public Policy minor. The new minor seems to have some similarities with that one, and we were wondering if you could address, in the rationale section or elsewhere, what the similarities and distinctions are.

2. We're glad to see some WGSS courses listed among the electives for the new minor. Might we suggest that the WGSS courses that are already approved for the Women, Gender and Public Policy minor be considered for addition to the list? We also have a number of courses on race, and given the stated focus of the social justice advocacy minor, we think that those might be considered as well.

Thanks so much for your consideration.

Best,
Mytheli

Program Learning Goals

Note: these are required for all undergraduate degree programs and majors now, and will be required for all graduate and professional degree programs in 2012. Nonetheless, all programs are encouraged to complete these now.

Program Learning Goals

- Upon successful completion of this minor, students will be able to:
- Analyze and navigate different behavioral situations in the public sector.
- Understand the fundamentals of public budgets, budgeting strategies, and financial management.
- Apply management tools to enhance organizational performance in the public sector.

Assessment

Assessment plan includes student learning goals, how those goals are evaluated, and how the information collected is used to improve student learning. An assessment plan is required for undergraduate majors and degrees. Graduate and professional degree programs are encouraged to complete this now, but will not be required to do so until 2012.
